

Living with HIV

Living with HIV can be scary but you don't have to deal with it alone. Your doctor or healthcare worker and other people living with HIV can support you through this difficult time.

Some people openly share their diagnosis with family and friends while others prefer to tell just one or two people they trust. Both are fine - it's totally up to you.

The important thing to remember is that taking treatment means you can live a long and healthy life like anyone else. Alongside treatment, there are lots of things you can do to keep yourself healthy and happy, and improve your overall wellbeing.

Newly diagnosed with HIV

Sharing your HIV-positive status

Antiretroviral treatment for HIV

Being told you have HIV can be a shock. Find out what support is available.

It's your choice if/when to tell anyone about your diagnosis. Read advice about how to tell people.

Taking treatment keeps HIV levels low in your body. Learn more about treatment for adults and children.

Health & wellbeing when living with HIV

Living with HIV personal stories and experiences

Alongside treatment, there are other ways to stay healthy such as changing your diet or

It can be reassuring to read stories from people living with HIV to help you realise that exercising.

you're not alone.

Last updated: 16 May 2018